As from 31 December 2006 all companies had to ensure that their websites, business letters and order forms (both hard and soft copy) contain the company's full name in legible characters and its place of registration, company number and registered office.

In your opinion does this include business cards?

Thanks for your input.

I don't think it does.

I have treated e-mails as "business correspondence" and therefore have ensured that they have the appropriate footer with all details within it.
